And now a few words from me:

Hi! My name is Bandi. I love ... well, everything! People, other dogs, walks, food, and car rides. I'm up for any adventure. I like to keep busy by playing with my toys, my foster siblings, my humans... you name it. I would love a home with another playful pup, but if you're up for multiple games of fetch a day, then I'd be just as happy. I have some moments of downtime in the day where I love to flop on my back on the couch beside you. At that time, you're welcome to give my belly a rub, or just bask in my cuteness. That is up to you. I enjoy a good cuddle, complete with hugs and kisses, but this doesn't last too long. I have too many toys to play with to just sit around all day. Now, let's talk about food. Foster mom insists that I only eat "dog food". I beg to differ. These people eat a lot of lovely smelling things that I would desperately like to try. Foster mom says it's a good thing that I have wee legs because if given the chance, I would be on the counter. Next to toys and playing, food is my favourite thing. I just can't get enough. If I'm the dog you're looking for, handsome, playful and loving, then I would love to arrange a meeting with you.

And now a few words from my foster family:

Bandi is a wonderful little fellow. Playful, affectionate, independent and cuddly; he is the whole package. Anyone who walks through the door is his friend. He is just such a happy little man. We are working on his manners with regards to food. He seems to be convinced that every morsel in the house is meant for him. Because of this, he eats his meals in his crate and must wait until the other dogs are finished before he is allowed to come out. He shows no sign of aggression with regards to food, but he has no boundaries. He is willing to watch the people in the house eat, and no longer attempts to get their food. But his furry siblings are not given the same respect. This includes when treats are given, although we are working on that too. He is learning sit and to walk nicely on the leash, but he is 100% Dachshund and is very stubborn and set in his ways. He had a couple of accidents in the house when he first arrived, but since then he has been a perfect gentleman. When he needs to go outside, he will rush back and forth between you and the door to ask to go outside.

Bandi would do well in an active household. He loves to be busy, playing with his fur foster siblings, toys or going out and about. He would do well in a home with other dogs to play with, but if he is with an active family that is willing to go for walks, play ball or just play fetch in the house, he would do just as well. Bandi's only real "flaws" seem to be his enthusiasm for food (but who isn't) and he is not fond of being left alone in the house. He is crate trained, so when we are out of the home, he is in his crate. He will howl, bark and dig at the front of the crate. We are working on him being in the crate where he cannot see us and hoping that eventually he will get comfortable for longer periods of time alone. When people are within sight, he is quite content being in the crate for short periods of time. He sleeps in the crate beside our bed at night and doesn't make a sound until morning when it is time to go outside, at which time he lets out little whimpers. Overall, he is a great little pup and will be a great fit for an active family.
