And now a few words from me:

Hi there! My name is Oskar — that's Oskar with a "k," not a "c"! I'm a calm, gentle guy at heart, but I can be a little anxious and cautious when meeting new people or dogs. My foster mom and dad say I've come a long way since arriving at their home a few weeks ago. At first, I wasn't too sure about my foster siblings, but now I'm best buds with one of my foster brothers — we're great friends! One of my favorite parts of the day is when my foster mom grabs the leashes for our walks. I LOVE pack walks, and I always like to be right at the front leading the way. It makes me so happy! Now, I do have to be honest... when I don't know you, I can be defensive until I gain trust in you, and I have time to bond with you. My foster family has learned how to help me feel safe, and I've learned to relax and trust more. I just need an understanding, patient home that will give me time to feel secure. If you're looking for a handsome fella who will be your loyal and loving friend once I trust you... well, I just might be your guy!

And now a few words from my foster family:

Oskar is an incredibly sweet and endearing boy. While he was initially slow to warm up to us (both foster parents and foster fur siblings), this is simply part of his personality as he takes time to build trust. Once he feels secure, his affectionate nature truly shines. One of Oskar's most charming quirks is his "blanket routine." He is a master at covering himself up with his blanket; watching him do this is adorable! Oskar is fully house-trained. He signals when he needs to go outside by going to the door and barking. Since joining our home three weeks ago, he has transformed into a loving, devoted companion. He enjoys spending time with his people, thrives on companionship, and absolutely loves going on "pack walks." He prefers to be the leader and is always the first one ready at the door. After walks, he often engages in playful interactions with his foster brother. Don't let his age fool you, he still has plenty of energy and spirit. Oskar will thrive in a patient and quiet home ready to give him the time he needs to trust, while providing all the love he deserves!

MEDICAL NOTE:

Earlier this year, there was concern about possible back pain, which was treated with pain relief and anti-inflammatory medication. Since coming into our care, he has not exhibited any signs of discomfort.
