And now a few words from me:

Sid the kid here! I'm a young boy who is sweet, affectionate and loves to be with my people. I love to burrow under blankets when relaxing. I also enjoy exploring outside and getting up close to nature. I really prefer a home where I can hang out with my family, rather than being left alone for hours and hours each day. I get anxious when I'm left alone, and worry that my humans are not going to come back. I'm pretty good in the training department, when speaking of housetraining and crate training. But I do need a family that will treat me like a dog and set up some routines, rules and boundaries. Want to meet?

And now a few words from my foster family:

Sid is a cute, quirky young fellow. His quirks are of the good kind, but he is prone to anxiety when left alone for hours, so he would be best suited to a home with people that can work from home, can take him to work, or can provide him with a daycare setting. He loves people, although he can be a bit shy and timid at first until he figures out the lay of the land. He absolutely loves to explore the backyard and neighborhood. He can be found under a blanket in his time of relaxation. He enjoys playing with other dogs, especially those that are well balanced and not hyperactive! Older teenagers who are dog-savvy would be great for Sid, as he does not enjoy loud noises.
